COOKIE POLICY

What Are Cookies?

Most of the websites you visit use cookies to enhance their service offering. These small text files collect and use information that makes websites easier to use. Among other things, cookies ensure that you can remain logged in to a website, and they remember your preferences, such as location and language settings.
Thanks to cookies, website owners can see how often their sites — and which pages — are visited. Some cookies also make it possible to recognise pages you have visited earlier, which enables the website to learn about your preferences.
